Auburn Alumni Association, Auburn, Alabama

'Get Five To Vote For Amendment Five'

By Thomas D. Russell, chairman

State Committee for the Adoption of Amendment 5

At the risk of being repetitious, I want to use the Alumnews to reiterate my challenge to each Auburn alumnus—Get five to vote for Amendment 5 on December 17. You can't afford to do less for your own benefit, for the benefit of Auburn, and—above all—for the benefit of all Alabama.

I have paid my respects before to the incomparable Auburn Spirit. I have witnessed it during the lean years when one Auburn student phrased the situation thus: "Auburn has lost many football games, but she has never lost a pep rally." I have seen it again this year when Auburn lost neither a football game nor a pep rally. On November 30, I saw somewhat more than enough of it for the eyes of an Alabama alumnus, but I want to see that same determination and enthusiasm once again this year—I want to see it at the polls on December 17.

Frankly, I am confident that Auburn alumni living in Alabama will turn out in full force on December 17 to vote for Amendment 5. I am sure that no Auburn alumnus wants some of API's top scientists jammed onto balconies, into temporary shacks, condemned buildings, and the ends of hallways. Each alumnus, I am certain, regrets as much as I do the limitation that outmoded and inadequate equipment places on vital research at Auburn. I know that all Auburn alumni want the best possible instruction for students in the agricultural and veterinary sciences.

But I also know that your vote alone is not enough to insure the passage of Amendment 5. Your influence too is needed to explain Amendment 5, Auburn's research program, and the benefit of research to all Alabamians. More than anything else, it is needed to be sure that people do not forget to vote on December 17. There is no real opposition to Amendment 5; however, there is always the silent group that votes against anything and everything.

In each county a committee for the adoption of Amendment 5 is at work. Give them your support until December 17 and on December 17 appoint yourself as a committee of one to carry at least one automobile full of voters to the polls.

Auburn Rolls To First National Grid Title

By Buddy Chambers

Coach Ralph Jordan's unbeaten and untied Auburn Tigers completed the first perfect Tiger season since 1913, won Auburn's first SEC championship, and her first National Championship as they walloped the University of Alabama, 40-0, before 44,000 fans in Birmingham's Legion Field.

Auburn scored two touchdowns in the first period, three in the second, and one in the third, using second and third string players in much of the second half. Only when the Tide threatened to score after a fourth quarter interception did Jordan send back his first team to preserve Auburn's top-rank defensive record.

Atkins

Lorino, who totaled 56 yards running and intercepted three passes including

Billy Atkins, senior fullback, moved to third in the nation's scoring as he accounted for 16 points by driving over from the one and six yard lines and kicking four PAT's. His season's total was 82 points. Also outstanding offensively was Lefthalf Tommy

one 79-yard TD steal.

Center Jackie Burkett was another standout with a 66 yard TD gallop after an interception. Quarterback Lloyd Nix had another fine day to finish second among SEC yardage-makers with 803 yards. Had his 77-yard run in the final period not been called back by penalty, Lefty Lloyd would have topped the league in total yardage.

Eleven seniors, including regulars End Jimmy Phillips, Tackle Ben Preston, Guard Tim Baker, Halfback Bobby Hoppe, and Atkins made their last appearance for Auburn a memorable one with the outstanding victory, running Auburn's unbeaten string to 14 games.

The Shug Jordan Story

By Bill Beckwith

It has been a long time since the cold night of February 25, 1951 when Coach Ralph Jordan wheeled his green Mercury into Dr. Ralph B. Draughon's drive and hastily rushed into conference with the football screening committee, the president, and Athletic Director Jeff Beard.

Only this group knows exactly what transpired during this midnight conversation on terms of contract, but there was another group standing outside Dr. and Mrs. Draughon's house who could visualize what was in the making for Auburn football. "We don't worry about winning any championships here at Auburn," the alumni said, "all we want is a respectable football team that can hold its own—maybe a team good enough to win at least five games a year."

James Ralph Jordan, the native of Selma who entered Auburn at age 17 to take Civil Engineering, wanted his chance at the reins of the Tigers. This had always been his dream... head coach at Auburn.

Jordan had retained his poise throughout the elimination period of the names of hundreds of possibly interested—but chiefly uninterested—coaches, candidates for Auburn's head coaching position. Finally, there were only two names, and on this winter

TIME OUT between crucial plays—After an undefeated season and a national championship, Coach Ralph (Shug) Jordan relaxes with his wife Evelyn before diving into the big job of recruiting, which comes up all too soon after the close of a football season.

In Electrical, Mechanical Engineering—

Auburn Accreditation Suspended

The Engineers' Council for Professional Development has notified President Ralph B. Draughon that accreditation has been temporarily withdrawn for the curricula in electrical and mechanical engineering at API. This action was taken at the Council's recent annual meeting following an inspection last April.

The reasons given for the action were: (1) faculty teaching loads in these departments are considered excessive, and (2) faculty salaries are too low in the judgment of the Council.

According to the accrediting agency, these weaknesses have existed since 1949. The ECPD's report stated: "The situation with regard to the faculty has not only failed to improve in the past eight years but has changed, if at all, for the worse. It is on this basis that the curricula in electrical and mechanical engineering are judged to be below minimum standards."

Administrative authorities of the institution stated that enrollment in the School of Engineering at Auburn has increased from 1,255 in the Fall of 1951 to 3,249 in the Fall of 1957. The increasing competition from industry and other better-financed colleges, coupled with the failure to receive sufficient funds, has made it impossible for the college to raise salaries sufficiently or to increase the size of the faculty in proportion to the growing enrollment.

OVERFLOW CROWD ATTENDS POST MORTEM EXAMINATION—

DR. D. F. JOHNSON, API professor of pathology, traces the effects of diseases on the organs of a dissected animal for a jam-packed house of veterinary medicine students in the Autopsy Room in Cary Hall. The group shown here represents less than half a class. The room is so small that students must observe and listen in shifts. Just to the left of Dr. Johnson at the end of the cart bearing the body of an undissected animal is the incinerator necessary for disposal of diseased carcasses. There is scarcely room between the incinerator and the cart for a man to stand and hoist carcasses into the incinerator opening. When the incinerator is in operation unpleasant odors often permeate the air in the area, particularly that in Magnolia Hall (men's dormitories). Adoption of Amendment 5 would provide a building away from the main campus to house a larger autopsy room and a new incinerator far enough away to be inoffensive.

ME and EE Courses Accreditation Lost

ministrative officials have repeatedly advised legislative committees that accreditation was in jeopardy in a number of important areas of the institution.

Following the action of the 1957 Legislative Session, which granted a small increase in the appropriation to the institution, salaries were increased considerably; however, they are still too low, and no funds were provided to

President Considers Loss Temporary

Commenting on the ECPD action to the ALUMNEWS, Dr. Ralph B. Draughon said: "This action by ECPD applies to only two of our engineering departments. Other departments also are suffering a shortage of teaching strength because of the size of our enrollment; however, they are not discredited."

"We consider this situation as temporary only, and we are making and will continue to make every possible effort to have it corrected."

employ additional teachers. It is hoped that sufficient funds will be made available in the near future to enable college officials to correct this situation.

The API graduates in these engineering curricula will have no difficulty in obtaining employment, because they are well-prepared to assume responsible positions in engineering work.

GRADUATION SPEAKER

Dr. Howard M. Phillips

Dr. Howard M. Phillips, president of Alabama College, Montevallo, will be commencement speaker at API graduation ceremonies Friday, December 13 at 2:30 p. m. in the Student Activities Building.

Dr. Phillips, a native of North Carolina, studied at and earned degrees from Wake Forest College and the University of Virginia. Before taking over the presidency of Alabama College at Montevallo, he was a professor of biology and dean of the graduate school at Emory University.

A council member of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies group, Dr. Phillips has served with and headed many scientific and educational organizations. He is a Phi Beta Kappa.

Overcrowded Class Meets In Theatre

Crowded classroom conditions have forced Auburn to take unusual measures this fall. In the School of Engineering, a freshman class in mechanical engineering has been forced to borrow the facilities and space of the Tiger Theatre in downtown Auburn.

No facilities exist on the API campus to seat a class the size of this one. Two hundred thirty members are in the class. Due to space seating, the members completely fill the theatre. Philip Potter, head professor of mechanical engineering, said the class may reach 330 in number in the coming winter quarter. He cited the need for a classroom auditorium to seat 300 to 400 students.

Two other mechanical engineering classes of 160 members each are crowded into Broun Hall. Also, large mathematics, history and English sections have to share Broun's crowded facilities.

Potter said the shortage of space stems from increased enrollment and a shortage of trained faculty members.

THE AUBURN ALUMNEWS is published by Auburn Alumni Association, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala. Jerry Roden, Jr., '46, is editor. The staff includes Bill Beckwith, '51, sports editor; Lester King, '51, API photographer. The Auburn Alumnews was entered as second class matter February 4, 1946, at the Post Office, Auburn, Alabama, under the Act of August 24, 1912.

ALUMNI EXCHANGE CORNER—

By the following process of rationalizing his mania for scissors and a paste pot, the editor of the ALUMNEWS has produced the 'Exchange Corner' as a new ALUMNEWS feature: "Few people other than alumni editors see more than one or two alumni magazines. Alumni magazines by their very nature should deal with the problems of major concern in higher education. Therefore, to best present the problems of education, alumni editors should publish highlights from the lead articles or editorials in alumni magazines across the nation (Note: Please do not apply the principles of formal logic to this rationalization)."

If the 'Exchange Corner' is to represent honestly a cross section of alumni magazine opinion, we must select from articles with which the ALUMNEWS disagrees as well as from those which meet with our approval. Since the purpose of the feature is to stimulate thought, we will let the reader—if he cares to—decide which is which.

The Best Yardstick

"Quality of faculty is the best single yardstick for measuring the real worth of an institution of higher learning. Great teachers and scholars make great universities. They form the vital human nucleus of what an institution is and can be. Students of high quality are drawn to them, inspired by them, and guided by their example."

(From "A Philosophy of Education" by Henry T. Heald in the American Alumni Council News, December, 1956.)

The American Problem

"The big corporations offer good pay, security, and good prospects for advancement. But what is more—and this is not clearly understood—they offer a way of life . . . More and more individuals are feeling the pressures—and the inducements—to conform their lives and their thinking to the patterns laid down by these corporate organizations."

The Democratic Solution

"I am an incurable optimist. I believe in the strength and resources of freedom. I believe that with the good use of freedom, all obstacles can eventually be overcome."

(From "Big Business and Conformity" by Herbert H. Lehman in the City College (New York) Alumnus, October, 1957.)

Intellectual Sterility

"The product of today's education is simply not good enough. We have reached a standstill in education with mass education about as widespread as we could hope for."

"There is one direction left in which we can progress, and that is the improvement of the quality of education . . . and this in itself is exciting."

"The tremendous drive toward organization of contemporary society with which every citizen is faced will result in 'boredom.' Much can be done at a great many levels to alleviate the problems of intellectual sterility. Our greatest asset will be intellectual passion, a joy in dealing with the works of the human mind."

(Howard Gruber as quoted in "Great Debate," by Max Schaible in the Colorado Alumnus, May-June, 1957.)

How Important Is Agricultural Research?

With Sputniks flying overhead, how much does the average Alabama citizen need to be concerned with research in the agricultural and veterinary sciences? Perhaps more than most of us realize. A sound, productive, and progressive agriculture is necessary first for the health and economic well being of each of us, next for a well balanced state economy, and finally for national security, perhaps for national survival. Each phase of this relationship requires closer examination.

For consumer benefits—

The consumer sees the benefits of agricultural research most directly in the variety, quantity, quality, and economy of food placed on his table. However, most of us take our abundant and varied food supply for granted and we are prone to think of the price of food as rather high. Yet, startling changes of which we should remind ourselves have occurred in the past three decades.

USDA statistics show that in 1925 the average person ate 20 pounds of oranges, 14 pounds of chicken, 32 pounds of tomatoes, 10 pounds of ice cream, and 324 eggs per year. In 1956, the average person ate 61 pounds of oranges, 24 pounds of chicken, 52 pounds of tomatoes, 18 pounds of ice cream, and 369 eggs. Perhaps an even more significant indication of change is the fact that the average per capita consumption of beef jumped from 56 pounds in 1951 to 85 pounds in 1956.

The variety and freshness of our food is no longer determined by the seasons. Refrigeration, new methods of preservation, and increased production geared to year around markets have eliminated dependence on cured and canned meats, fruits, and vegetables. Sanitary methods of production and careful inspection have virtually eliminated fear of contracting diseases from unwholesome food.

Despite the increasing cost of living the present day superior diet of the average American takes no larger share of his earnings (25 per cent) than the less varied, less healthful diet of 30 years ago.

Application of the results of research has increased the efficiency of the individual farm worker. In 1830 the average farm worker produced enough for himself and three others; today he produces enough for himself and 20 others. In the future he will have to produce even more if we are to eat as well or better than we do today.

For Alabama's economy—

The necessity of a progressive profitable agriculture for Alabama's economy hardly requires comment. An undisputed maxim for the economic growth of the state is that "we must attract and develop more industries." Fewer people on the farms must produce the food for more people in town—or else we must spend a large portion of the money gained from industry for food imported from elsewhere. Furthermore, the processing of farm products represents in its own right a significant industrial development—for example, consider the growth of the broiler business alone, which has become the number one industry of some large counties such as Marshall and some small counties such as Cleburne. Yet the potential for developing fruit, vegetable, dairy, and meat processing industries has scarcely been touched.

All of the foregoing does not consider the fact that income of the individual farmer still determines the prosperity—or lack of it—in a majority of Alabama's 67 counties. Continued research will enable the Alabama farmer to increase his production for each hour of labor and will enable him to cut losses from insect damage to crops and from the effects of disease upon his livestock.

For national security—

The importance of a sound agriculture to our national security is difficult to measure in concrete terms, but one school of thought considers agricultural progress imperative to our survival as an industrial power and political leader in world affairs. There are some concrete facts behind its theories.

More than one-half of all raw materials used in the United States each year comes from agriculture. The technological race between totalitarian powers and the free world demands that more and more manpower be devoted to professional, mechanical, and scientific pursuits, which means that the declining ratio of farm workers must continue along with increased agricultural production.

Conditioned as we are to the problem of farm surpluses, any insistence that there is an imperative for increased agricultural production at first glance seems absurd, but phenomenal population growth indicates the contrary. During the past 30 years the U. S. population increased 45 per cent; during the same period use of agricultural commodities increased about 60 per cent; the surplus of agricultural commodities has equalled about 6 per cent of total production. During the next 20 years a 35 per cent population increase and a 43 per cent increase (beyond the present surplus) for agricultural products is anticipated.

Our recent increases have been achieved with little increase in cropland. Greater per acre production and the change from horse and mule-drawn to mechanized farm equipment have chiefly accounted for a greater quantity of marketable farm commodities. Forty million acres once devoted to feed for horses and mules have been released for production of food and fiber for human consumption. No new revolution that will release a comparable amount of land is foreseeable.

The 45 per cent increase in farm production that we need during the next 20 years will be harder to achieve than 60 per cent increase made during the past 30 years. It can be done, but it will require painstaking research and application of the results of research.

In the foregoing discussion, estimates are confined to U. S. domestic needs. Demands from our international commitments and from the necessity of exportation to our economy are more intangible. But we are forced month by month to realize more and more that the problems of the rest of the world are our problems too. Hunger and other privations are still major causes of national and international upheavals.

Careful estimates indicate that one out of each twenty people who have walked on the face of the earth is alive today. Some students of world affairs predict a doubling of world population in the next few decades—barring an all-out nuclear war. If such predictions fail by a considerable margin, there will still be an almost inconceivable increase in mouths to feed, bodies to nourish and clothe.

As things now stand, the United States will have to lead the way, in research to show how that great population can be fed, feed a larger portion of it than we desire to, or fight off the less fortunate portion of it when the hungry people of the world attempt to help themselves to the richest table. Leading the way in research for greater production seems the most desirable alternative.

AFTER A FEW MOMENTS at the handles of an old-fashioned, mule-drawn turning plow pretty Pat Murphy, API sophomore in Secretarial Training, says, "For the sake of feminine beauty, let's don't go back to this." Not so many years ago many women—and children—in Alabama knew the feel of turning plow handles, suffered the aching feet and legs and wore the calloused hands that went therewith. Yet such methods of farming then seemed far advanced when one looked at Millet's "Man With the Hoe." Through the centuries research has gradually lightened the drudgery of farm life, has released farm laborers to industry to produce manufactured goods and bring a higher standard of living, has provided a greater variety of more delicious and more healthful food the year around—and has given women time to preserve their beauty and charm. Adoption of Amendment 5 will provide for continued and more comprehensive research in agriculture and veterinary science at Auburn.

ALL OVER AG HILL highly trained scientists conduct their work sandwiched into each available nook and cranny. Here five agronomists share a single office area on one of the two balconies built in Comer Hall as an emergency measure. Experiment Station officials note that adequate working facilities rank with salary in importance to the scientist. Because of inadequate space and facilities for research, Auburn is continuously handicapped in attracting competent new staff and retaining the outstanding scientists it now has. Passage of Amendment 5 would provide more adequate space and expanded facilities for these five men and their associates on Ag and Vet Hills.

'IT'S MIGHTY ROUGH SON'—Coach Ralph Jordan humorously struck this antiquarian pose with his son, Ralph, Jr., to demonstrate to the photographer the years that a triumphant season can put on a man. Come to think of it, Coach could have been an actor.

Auburn's Shug Jordan Story

night there was but one left — Shug Jordan, assistant coach at Auburn for 12 years and aide at Georgia for an additional five years.

Another fellow, Garland Washington (Jeff) Beard, had been athletic director less than a month but he was willing to gamble his career, the result of 14 years at Auburn on the only man to answer Auburn's need—Jordan.

"I'll stake my job on Shug," said Beard. "He is the only man that can organize Auburn people and restore the prestige of football here."

Needless to say now, Beard's job looks safe for many, many years.

Today, on this beautiful day* of December, 1957, Auburn is No. 1 in the nation in football—The National Champions. And uncontested, Auburn collegiate football is the best in the entire world. *(Editor's note to the reader: If today doesn't seem at all beautiful to you, don't mind; Beckwith still regards it as beautiful from his position 10 games above the clouds.)

Jordan and his Auburn football team have surpassed all expectations. Instead of Jordan's being just another alumnus at his alma mater, he is the "Coach of the Year" for the nation. This honor is bestowed annually on the coach doing the best job that year.

Auburn has other ideas: Jordan is not only "Coach of the Year"; he is one of the best football coaches in the nation today, as the records of his teams since 1951 show.

Statistically, Auburn owns the longest winning streak of any team in the nation, 14 straight . . . Auburn was the ONLY unbeaten and untied major college in the nation for 1957 . . . Auburn's football team under Jordan has lost only four of its last 36 games.

Let's look at Auburn football under Jordan since that night at the President's mansion in 1951:

1951 . . . Jordan's regime started with the remains of a team that lost all ten games in 1950. While the rest of the conference was saying "Auburn should not win a game in 1951," Jordan and Co. proceeded to win five of their first six games, all upsets. The element of surprise soon disappeared, but the Tigers still finished 5-5-0 for the year.

1952 . . . With element of surprise gone and the presence of few, if any, real football players, Auburn was fortunate to finish the year with two wins and eight losses. Present however was the future of Auburn—a first class freshman team with names like Joe Childress, Fob James, M. L. Brackett, Jim Pyburn, Frank D'Agostino, and Bob Scarbrough.

Get five to vote for Amendment 5 (State Committee for the Adoption of Amendment 5.)

1953 . . . Hard work and organization on the part of Auburn alumni started paying off. The second game victory over Mississippi, 13-0, was the clue to the future. In a whirlwind Tiger year, Auburn played Alabama for the SEC championship and a Cotton Bowl Bid. Alabama won, 10-7, so Auburn went to the Gator Bowl with a miraculous 7-2-1 record. Jordan was voted "SEC Coach of the Year."

1954 . . . The death of the X and Y systems produced one of the greatest teams in Tiger history. Few teams ever fielded a first unit like Ends Jim Pyburn and Jimmy Long; Tackles M. L. Brackett and Frank D'Agostino; Guards Bob Scarbrough and George Atkins; Center Jack Locklear; Quarterback Bobby Freeman; Halfbacks Fob James and Dave Middleton, and Fullback Joe Childress. Auburn finished the year with 7-3-0 record and clobbered Baylor, 33-13 in the Gator Bowl.

1955 . . . A win over Georgia Tech, 14-12, was the first highlight of season Jordan and his boys posted the best record since 1932 when they finished, 8-1-1. Another Gator Bowl followed. National prestige had arrived on the Plains. All-Americas were produced in Joe Childress, Frank D'Agostino, Jimmy Phillips, and Fob James.

1956 . . . By now, Coach Jordan's famous slogan "we'll have ANOTHER good football team" was proven. With outstanding sophomores plus some proven veterans, the Tigers rolled along to a 7-3-0 season and the future looked beautiful. A blazing finish brought on great predictions for 1957.

1957 . . . No experienced quarterback; no proven fullback; a weak line, and other weaknesses predicted here and there. Lloyd Nix came through at quarterback as the most "underrated" football player . . . Billy Atkins came through in All-America style at fullback . . . Tim Baker captained the undefeated team . . . Red Phillips was great and a unanimous All-America . . . Jerry Wilson teamed with Phillips as the first pair to ever make All-SEC from the same team at the same position . . . Jackie Burkett was third string All-America and voted the "Sophomore of the Year for the SEC" . . . Zeke Smith was recognized as one of the top SEC Sophs . . . Tackles Ben Preston, Cleve Wester, Dan Presley, and Teddy Foret were terrific . . . Tommy Lorino finished in a blaze of glory, and Bobby Hoppe was the top defensive back and best blocker in the nation . . . 10-0-0 and the National Football Championship—who would have believed it?

That's Auburn football and it's the best.

Thanks Ralph Jordan . . . Thanks Jeff Beard . . . Thanks Dr. Ralph B. Draughon . . . And thanks Auburn alumni . . . I'm honored to be a part of such a wonderful organization.

Bill BECKWITH

Just a week before the Alabama game, a certain sports editor of a Columbus, Ohio, newspaper said "wouldn't it be a shame if a Polytechnic Institute was declared the national football champions."

Well, it aint a shame and they can call us anything, but there's no doubt that Auburn's football team of 1957 was the best in the nation.

"Whom have they played," barked Ohio State's Woody Hayes (or Hughes—or whatever his name is).

The shame of all these statements is the Big Ten's idea that the champion of their conference (believed to be weaker than the SEC or SWC) should automatically become National Champs.

Winning the Southeastern Conference Championship with a perfect record is enough to elate Auburn folks, but being No. 1 in the nation is just a little more than I can grasp. Fear not however, acceptance is easy, but the fear of the bubble bursting into nightmares has caused many sleepless nights.

Honors on top of honors will be bestowed on this great team. Some of the individual acclaims (check Big Red's story for most of his) are as follow:

In addition, Jackie Burkett was voted "Sophomore of the Year," by a panel of sports writers in the Deep South and was presented the JACKSONVILLE (Fla.) JOURNAL Trophy . . . Jimmy Phillips was everyone's All-America and was voted "Lineman of the Year" for the SEC. Additional honors are on the way for Big Red also . . . All-Star football games are loaded with Auburn players. Phillips will play in the East-West Shrine game in Frisco, the Hula Bowl in Hawaii, and the Senior Bowl at Mobile. Ben Preston will play in the North-South game in Miami and the Senior Bowl. Tim Baker will play in the North-South game in Miami, and turned down another because of his love for hunting. Billy Atkins will participate in the North-South and Senior Bowl. Bobby Hoppe was asked to play in the Blue-Gray but a dislocated elbow will sideline him. Another Auburn footballer, probably Jeff Weekly, will play in the Blue-Gray.

Basketball season has opened and Coach Joel Eaves started against Jacksonville State with a lineup of Forwards Rex Frederick (Corner) and Shot Johnston (Cowarts); Center Bill Gregory (Auburn), and Guards Jimmy Lee (Columbus, Ga.) and Bobby Tucker (New Market). Some of the other boys who could crash the starting lineup if any falter are Ty Samples (Huntsville), Bayward McManus (Hamilton, Ga.), Terry Chandler (Cullman), and Bill McGriff (Pisgah).

A knee operation will sideline 1957 Soph sensation Henry Hart for this season but he'll return for his two years of eligibility in 1959. Coach Eaves expects to redshirt Sophomores Ray Groover and Jimmy Fibbe.

QUICK NOTES—Presentation of the National Football Championship trophy will be made Dec. 10 in Auburn by the National Sports Editor Ted Smits of New York . . . Frosh Cage Coach Bill Lynn has one of those big 'uns this season in 6-11 Walter Jackson of Tenaflly, N. J. . . . Two of early frosh basketball standouts are Guard Porter Gilbert of Geraldine and Forward David Vaughn of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Jimmy Phillips was the first round draft choice of the L. A. Rams and Bobby Hoppe was third choice of the San Francisco 49ers. Later draft choices will probably include Ben Preston and Billy Atkins . . . Little Lloyd Nix missed the SEC total offense leadership by only 35 points.

Big Red Everybody's All-America Choice

By Bill Beckwith

The name of Jimmy (Big Red) Phillips is now inscribed in the football annals with those of the greatest who have ever worn the Orange and Blue — many will contend that he is the greatest, and Auburn has produced many great ones—Moon Ducote, Walter Gilbert, Monk Gafford, Jim Pyburn, Joe Childress, to name a few at random.

Each may take his own pick for the greatest, but certainly no other has received the national acclamation given to Big Red.

Here's a list of the first string All-America teams that Phillips has made (and frankly, there are more that haven't been tabulated):

Associated Press, Look Magazine, United Press, American Football Coaches, Today Show of Television, Sporting News, NEA, Movietone News, Unipix Productions, New York News, Boston American, Williamson System, Chicago Tribune, Athletic Publications, I.N.S., and Sporting News.

Phillips also appeared on two of the nation's top television shows—the Ed Sullivan Show as a member of the American Football Coaches team, and the Perry Como Show as a member of the Look All-America team.

Add "Lineman of the Year" honors for the SEC and a big trophy presented by the Birmingham Quarterback Club and you have some of the numerous honors won by Red. More of these honors, local and national, are on the way but news of these will come later.

Alex City also scored with a "Jimmy Phillips Day" in honor of the redhead. Gifts were aplenty as the hometown folks showed their appreciation to the (as they say) "best football player in the world and universe."

November Guests Of Alumni Association

THE MEN BEHIND THE NATIONAL FOOTBALL CHAMPS—

COACH JORDAN AND STAFF — As Coach Jordan has pointed out more than once, a championship team requires first class coaching from end to end and from the frontline through the backfield. Pictured above are the men who did

After Ten Games Tigers' Slate Still Clean

To some folks it was a long, long season, but it is finished—gloriously. Here is the final wrap-up of game highlights — except for the Alabama game which is summarized on the front page.

AUBURN VERSUS GEORGIA

Auburn's All-America End Jimmy Phillips grabbed a short four-yard pass from southpaw Quarterback Lloyd Nix to cap a 52-yard drive for Auburn's lone touchdown in the second quarter. Then the nation's No. 1 defense protected the lead successfully to beat an inspired Georgia Bulldog, 6-0, before 26,000 fans in Columbus' Memorial Stadium.

The Tigers' ground game wasn't too impressive, so the Plainsmen called on their passing game. Nix responded with nine completions on ten attempts and 72 yards. Phillips caught five of the aeriels for 34 yards.

Center Jackie Burkett played another "Lineman of the Week" type game, while Guards Zeke Smith and Tim Baker were also line standouts. The alert pair stopped Georgia's deepest penetration at the three with Baker knocking QB Charlie Britt loose from the ball and Smith falling on it.

AUBURN VS. FLORIDA STATE

Auburn's unbeaten and untied Tigers punctured the Florida State defenses for 20 points in the first half and went on to a 29-7 triumph over the Seminoles before a crowd of 16,208 in Tallahassee.

Here is a brief resume of the four Auburn TD's:

(1) Fullback Billy Atkins climaxed a 41-yard drive on the tenth play by piling over from the one-yard line. Big plays were a 16-yard pass from Nix to Phillips and a nine-yard sweep by Lefthalf Tommy Lorino.

(2) Righthalf Lamar Rawson drove

Long Island, N. Y.; Thomas L. Hicks, '35, Montgomery; Frank T. Harley, '31, Montgomery; Rufus A. Nettles, '39, Opelika; J. R. McHugh, Jr., '43, Columbus, Ga.; Walter C. Warr, '55, Guntersville; David D. Watts, '56; Dallas, Tex.; E. C. Connor, '49, Columbus, Ga.; Chuck Morgan, '40, Atlanta, Ga.; Carl Happer, '40, Birmingham; Maj. Robert Lee Bullard, III, Atlanta, Ga.; R. W. (Dick) Payne, '32, Birmingham; D. W. Ballard, '44, Albuquerque, N. M.; George H. Marsh, '08, Montgomery; J. M. Daw, '43, Port Arthur, Tex.

Joy D. Stokes, Port Arthur, Tex.; Don B. Wendling, '40, Birmingham; Garrell E. Anthony, '55, Montgomery; Cleve Brown, '35, Birmingham; James L. Rice, Jr., '57, Birmingham; and Christopher S. Yeats, '57, Templeton, Calif.

over from the one to finish a 48-yard drive late in the first quarter. Bryant Harvard's 20-yard sprint around end put the ball in scoring position at the four. Ronnie Robbs kicked the PAT.

(3) A 33-yard screen pass from Nix to Righthalf Bobby Hoppe set up the third score with Atkins driving the last five yards on fourth down. Atkins converted.

(4) After an intercepted pass by Rawson at the FSU 38, an FSU holding penalty and a 15-yard sprint by Atkins put the ball at the two from where Lorino drove over for the six-pointer. Atkins PAT attempt was partially blocked, but carried over to give him an all-time Auburn scoring mark of 66 points. The old record of 65 was set by FB Joe Childress in 1954.

Ends Jerry Wilson and Phillips were line standouts and combined to throw FSU Quarterback Joe Majors in the end zone for the Tigers final two points.

UNANIMOUS CHOICE ALL-AMERICA—

BIG RED IN ACTION—To no one's surprise Jimmy Phillips' pass grabbing, blocking, and crashing defensive play won him a place on practically everybody's All-America.

E. V. SMITH . . . recognition

Dr. E. V. Smith, '28 Is AAAS Fellow

Dr. E. V. Smith, '28, dean API School of Agriculture and director API Agricultural Experiment Station, has been elected a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

A native of Ozark, Ala., Dr. Smith received his B. S. degree from API in 1928, and his master's and doctor's degrees from Iowa State College in 1931 and 1938. He was assistant botanist at API 1931-36 and associate botanist 1936-44. During this time he taught and carried on research in the fields of weed control and fish culture. He did much in the use of herbicides for control of weeds, especially in the eradication of nutgrass.

Dr. Smith was a research teammate of H. S. Swingle, API fish culturist, in the early years of fish research work at Auburn which became world-recognized. Thirty research publications were authored by them.

In 1944 Dr. Smith was appointed assistant dean and director of the API School of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station. He was made associate dean and director in 1949 and on January 1, 1951 was appointed dean and director, succeeding the late M. J. Funchess.

In notifying Dr. Smith of his election, Dale Wolfe, administrative secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, pointed out that being elected a Fellow of the Association is a recognition of standing as a scientist and an expression of esteem.

Auburn And University Trustees Interchange Services

Campaigns for the adoption of Amendments 4 and 5 provide an interesting sidelight on the relationship between the University of Alabama and Auburn.

Frank P. Samford, Birmingham, an Auburn alumnus and a member of the Auburn Board of Trustees is chairman of a state Committee for the Adoption of Amendment 4, which will provide 4½ million dollars for the expansion of the facilities at the University's Medical Center in Birmingham.

Thomas D. Russell, an Alabama alumnus and a member of the Board of Trustees for the University, heads the State Committee for the Adoption of Amendment 5, which will provide 4½ million dollars for expanding and improving research and teaching facilities in agricultural and veterinary sciences at Auburn.

For Our Health Vote Amendment 4

To Auburn Alumni:

You are aware, I am sure, of the critical shortage of doctors, dentists, and nurses in Alabama. Amendment 4 offers you an opportunity to do something about this serious shortage. The University of Alabama Medical College and School of Dentistry are the only places in Alabama where young people can be educated as physicians and dentists. The University School of Nursing is the largest school in the state to train young women to be registered nurses. These facilities must be expanded to meet the desperate need for doctors, dentists and nurses in Alabama.

Adoption of Amendment 4 will help assure the necessary expansion of facilities for training medical personnel, will make possible more medical research in Alabama, and will secure space for the construction of additional specialized hospitals at the Medical Center in Birmingham.

Amendment 4 specifically provides for a 4½ million dollar bond issue from which the revenue will be used as follows: $2,750,000 for the purchase by the State of Alabama through the University Medical College of 10½ blocks of land surrounding the present Medical Center; $1,000,000 to match federal funds in order to construct a $2,000,000 building for medical research and other academic pursuits in the Medical Center; $750,000 to match Hill-Burton funds to construct a $2,250,000 dormitory for nurses at the Medical Center.

Amendment 4 requires no new taxes. Bonds authorized by its adoption will be retired from the State's general fund.

Space here does not permit full detailing of the benefits that all Alabama will receive from the adoption of Amendment 4, but knowing Auburn alumni as I do, I am sure that you can visualize from this brief outline the tremendous importance of it. I want to urge your active support of Amendment 4 while you are working for the adoption of Auburn's vital Amendment 5—and please don't neglect to go to the polls on December 17 for the good of all Alabama.

Sincerely,

Frank P. Samford, chairman
Committee for the Adoption of Amendment 4

Alumnews To Feature Best Vote Getter

In January the Alumnews will feature the alumnus who carries the most voters to the polls on Dec. 17. The civic minded Auburnite will be given the full feature treatment—biography, picture, and all.

Since we believe in the integrity of Auburn alumni the rules are simple. After you have performed your citizen's duty on Dec. 17, drop a card to the Alumnews giving your name, your home town or community, and the number of voters that you carried to the polls. Your wife or any other member of your immediate family may assist you but should be given credit for so doing when you mail your card to the Alumnews.

(Note: If the number of voters reportedly carried to the polls should in any case exceed the total vote recorded in a community, our faith in the integrity of Auburn alumni will be somewhat shaken.)

Political campaigning on election day is expressly forbidden by law, but "getting out the vote" is a recognized civic function. The Alumnews is confident of the results on vital amendments if enough people go to the polls on Dec. 17.

Library Use Increases 93 Per Cent Since '52

Use of the API Library has increased 93 per cent since 1952, according to the Library Staff Bulletin. The library was crowded in 1952; no additional space has been provided since then. Hence, there is reason for fearing a permanent change in the anatomy of librarians and students who use the library. Fortunately, deformities resulting from sardine-type work and study are acquired characteristics and are therefore not transmissible through heredity.

In Memoriam-'05-'51

William Basher Clayton, '05, died in Dallas, Texas, on July 1, 1957. An active Auburn supporter all of his life, Mr. Clayton rose to a vice-presidency with General Electric Co. before his retirement a few years ago. He was born in Brooklyn, New York, but he attended high school in Eufaula and his family lived in Eufaula while he was a student at Auburn. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bess Clayton of Dallas.

Colquitt H. Lane, '21, died in Montgomery on Nov. 2, 1957. He was buried in Auburn. Survivors include his sister, Mrs. J. Borden (Margaret Lane Jackson, '27) of Atlanta.

Claude Hakanson, '28, died suddenly of a heart attack while attending a board meeting of the First Christian Church in Mobile on April 8, 1957. An architect, he had been associated with Roberts and Long in Mobile for a number of years. He designed the First Christian Church, where he died, and its education building. Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Ora Mae Lewis Hakanson, Mobile; a daughter, Eleanor Mae, API student; two brothers C. E. and R. A. Hakanson, Mobile; and two sisters, Mrs. E. N. Meriwether, Mobile, and Mrs. Charles Nicholson, Los Angeles, Calif.

Mrs. Edith Lazenby Brown, '51, died in St. Vincent's Hospital in Birmingham on Nov. 13, 1957. She is survived by her husband, Wilbur L. Brown, Jr.; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Lazenby, Opelika; a brother, Elmer Lazenby, Opelika; and a sister, Mrs. J. C. Knight, Phenix City.

AMIDST THE HUBBUB BOSSY AWAITS SURGERY—

ON THE OPERATING TABLE a not-so-patient cow waits for surgery in the Farm Animal Clinical Laboratory in Cary Hall. All types of surgical operations are performed in this 30'x40' room with 100-125 veterinary medicine students looking on. In the rear of the photograph can be seen an unheated, barn-like stable wing that houses the obstetrics laboratory. Observation classes are often conducted in obstetrics at the same time that other classes observe surgery. The resultant confusion prevents the most desirable results from the instructors' comments and demonstration. Best results from surgery cannot always be obtained because congestion increases the danger of contamination. If more space and additional facilities (which passage of Amendment 5 would provide) were available, the danger of contamination could be eliminated, the instruction of students would be more effective, and more farm animals could be brought into the clinic for examination and treatment.

Elected Agronomy Fellow

J. C. LOWERY . . . honored

J. C. Lowery, '23, API Extension Service, was elected a Fellow of the American Society of Agronomy on Nov. 19.

The award, made at ASA's Golden Jubilee meeting, cited Lowery for many outstanding contributions in both crops and soils work as an API Extension Service agronomist. He has been with the Extension Service since 1923.

In listing some of these contributions, the agronomy society said that Lowery's efforts in extension education were instrumental in getting the number of fertilizer grades in Alabama reduced from 56 to about a dozen. "He was one of the leaders in setting up the soil testing laboratory," the citation said. "He sponsored a successful long-time program to increase pasture and feed production. Lowery also helped write the Alabama Crop Improvement Law and organize the Alabama Crop Improvement Association."

L. G. McDonald, vocational agriculture teacher at Eva High School, won first place with his F.F.A. exhibit at the Morgan County Fair in Decatur. The originality of his exhibit has brought suggestions that he enter it in the State fair in Birmingham next year.

DECEMBER, 1957

A MAN CAN HARDLY SEE WHAT'S GOING ON—

NO PLEASANT STUDY—When a full class of students file into the Farm Animal Clinical Laboratory in Cary Hall to observe surgery there is hardly standing room. Students fill the windows, the seats of the 30'x40' amphitheatre, and the floor around the operating table. Much twisting and craning is necessary for some to see the surgical demonstrations.

Adoption of Amendment 5 would provide a new, enlarged Farm Animal Clinic with more space for students, better operating facilities. A large clinic would permit farmers to bring animals to Auburn for in-clinic diagnosis, treatment and study.

STUDENTS USE THE STEPS at the north end of Comer Hall for the only purpose that those steps can now serve. A window has replaced the doorway to which the steps once led. The hallway into which the door once led has long since been converted to office space in the overcrowded building which houses the heads of Alabama's agricultural research program. Someone has suggested that a chimney will have to be added to Comer Hall to provide access for the Director of the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station and his associates if continued crowded conditions on Ag Hill require any more chopping off of hallways for offices. Passage of Amendment 5 would provide a research building for many scientists now jammed into converted Comer Hall hallways.

LOVE THAT TIGER—

LOVELY BLANCHE BAXTER, freshman in Education from Louisville, Ala., playfully caresses the symbol of Auburn's gridiron crew. The real articles aren't quite as docile as Miss Baxter's little model—as ten teams about the Southland can testify from firsthand experience. However, one suspects that the feminine charm of ODK beauty Blanche Baxter might prove a more effective domesticating agent than all the Southeastern Conference coaches' men.

A Strange Bird Paints Louisiana Water Tank

Alumnus volunteer reporter Flynn Hudson, '52, reports a recent "War Eagle" achievement. Alexandria, La., has a new water tank—complete with "AUBURN" in bold type. Reporter Hudson has not learned the identity of the intrepid and talented decorator. Unconfirmed rumors accredit a large bird, having marked characteristics of the falcon family, with the painting; this bird is reportedly the former pet of the ubiquitous Kilroy, who attended many institutions before settling down in Samford Clock Tower.
